Little Character to the Speculation in Stocks in Wall Street Yesterday.

INROAD ON BANK RESERVES

DRAIN EXPECTED TO CONTINUE FOR SOME TIME.

New York, Dec. 1.-There was little character to the trading in stocks today, the constraint on the speculation being attributed generally to the money situation. The bank statement did not reflect as large an inroad on the reserves as was rate caused an apprehension that the full result was not included in the statement of the averages contained in the bank statement. The largest part of the loss came late in the week, and so figured to a small extent in the averages. Moreover the influences at work to cause the drain are expected to continue in force. The funds employed in making the December first payments may be slow in returning to the channels of the money market.

The English money market, on the other land showed the continue of the money market.

ruperation of reserves by the Bank of England, and there was a sharp decline in discount rates in London. Sterling exchange rates here also were weak.

The constraint in the stock market was shown in the smallness of the dealings rather than in any depression of tone. Dull resistance was in evidence, and some of the minor stocks made sharp advances, especially among the lesser iron industrials and the railroad equipment stocks. The constraint on the market was attributed in part to a desire to await the ef-fect of the forthcoming message of the president. The financial world has formed the opinion that the extent of the recommendations to be contained in the message may be pretty well inferred from previous official utterances, and does not leok for sensational surprises.

A heavy decline in a favorite specialty in the curb market speculation attracted attention, owing to the prevalent apprehension that a state of speculative inflations which is the special speculative inflation. tion in mining stocks may have laid the way for a collapse. The November transactions at the stock exchange fell to a total of less than 25,000,000 shares of stocks sold, or 7,428,600 less than in last No-vember, while the par value of bonds which changed hands was $35,765,200 less than in November of last year, the total declining to $43,340,800.

Total sales of bonds, par value, $728,000. Speculative activity in stocks has been restricted this week. Prices moved sluggishly and irregularly and often reversed themselves in the course of a day's trading. Special movements in a few stocks had a sustain-ing influence to some extent, but there were other cases where there was depression from special causes. The permanence of the low non-dividend paying stocks did not persist beyond the opening of the week and the return to the front of the most important high-grade railroad stocks had a beneficial effect on sentiment. Because of the small amount offered for sale the price of that delivery was at a premium all day. Deliveries today were the heaviest for several years, the total amount aggregating 4,000,000 bushels. The greater portion of the grain was put out by large elevator concerns and most of it was taken by prominent commission houses.

The Financier says this week: The official statement of the New York associated banks disclosed last week quite as undertakened of the previous week. The early reported gain in cash that week was much in excess of the sum which was estimated upon the basis of the trace-able movements of money. The less in band a beneficial effect on sentiment. The publication of the annual report of the Union Pacific was an influence in this shift of the preference of buyers.

Transfers of currency to San Francisco to move the fruit crop have been large during the week and there has been a movement to Canada as well in connection with the annual showing of the Canadian banks. The further probable requirements of southern money markets for completing the movement of the cotton crop is a further item to be considered. There has been a decided improvement in the position of the English money markets. The condition reported by the Bank of England on Thursday is felt to show the first of the years and most of it was taken by leading houses, rumors of a big deal in the local market were revived. News of the day was quite favorable to the bears. The market closed irregular. May opened a shade to higher, at 78% with the official figures. The outward movements of money in the last days of the week were so large as to indicate that the cosh return was made up on declined to 77%. The probability of an early increase in the crop movement had a weakening effect on the corn market. May closed 1/2%.
